Miguel Lambertini, after 12 years working in Marketing and Communication, left a multinational company in 2017 and became the CEO of his own personal project: to make a positive impact on as many people as possible through humour.

He is a reporter for the programme New in Town on CNN Portugal, where he presents entertaining lifestyle features. He is also the author and star of As Receitas do Chef Bernas, a comedy show on Canal Q.

He has appeared as an actor in several Portuguese soap operas, films and series, including Senhora do Mar, Barranco do Inferno, O Contra, Esperança, Amar Demais, Na Corda Bamba and Terra Brava, the most recent creation of César Mourão. He also does voice-over work for radio and television and is one of the voice impressionists of public figures in the new version of the political and social satire programme Contra-Informação.

He is a columnist for NiT Magazine, where he writes weekly humorous opinion pieces on television and cinema. He is also the author of the radio show and podcast Happiness Mentality, broadcast weekly on NiT FM.

With training in theatre and music, and experience in stand-up comedy, he has performed at previous editions of Festival F, the Luso-Brazilian Comedy Festival, and on the comedy stage at NOS Alive. He hosts various corporate events for brands such as Pfizer, SAP, Mercedes, Lusitania Seguros, NOS, Santander, Lidl, Microsoft, among others.
