Jéssica Córes made her television debut in 2015, playing Lyrís in the Rede Globo telenovela Verdades Secretas. In 2017, she made her first appearance on Portuguese television in the series País Irmão, broadcast on RTP1. In 2019, she took part in the series The Stripper, and in 2020 she joined the cast of Brasil Imperial, available on Amazon Prime Video. In the same year, she appeared in the series El Presidente, and in 2021 she became one of the leads in the Netflix series Cidade Invisível, where she played the character Camila/lara. In 2023, she appeared in the Rede Globo telenovela Fuzuê, portraying Olívia de Castro. In 2024, she starred in the Netflix film Biônicos, playing Maria dos Santos, an athlete who faces technological challenges within sport.

For her role in Biônicos, Jéssica underwent intense physical preparation, including meniscus surgery, physiotherapy, athletics training, weight training, yoga and combat practice. She lost more than 10 kg and devoted herself fully to the process, considering it one of the most demanding projects of her career.

Jéssica is an advocate for Black representation in film and television, having expressed her desire to contribute to new narratives that reflect society's diversity. Following her success in Fuzuê, she is focused on streaming projects and continues to explore challenging and inspiring roles.
